Brian's unique background of experiences as an attorney, Certified Public Accountant, manager, and entrepreneur allow him to adeptly tailor solutions to each client's particular challenges. With his background of many hats, Brian is firmly committed to developing practical strategies that align directly with each client's specific goals.

Prior to joining Odin, Feldman & Pittleman, Brian worked six years as a CPA and tax manager at PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC), which included a two-year tour in their Washington National Tax Services Office. Brian has also worked at a high-end tax CPA firm in northern Virginia that specializes in businesses and high-net-worth individuals within the health care industry. In his legal practice, Brian has drawn on this health industry focus by assisting clients on healthcare law matters, including matters involving HIPAA compliance, "Stark" Law, the Anti-Kickback Statute, and other federal and state healthcare laws.

Brian has also assisted his wife, a pediatric dentist, in the start-up and acquisition of her practice and regularly provides ongoing support in its management and operations. Such involvement allows Brian to operate from a client-centric vantage point, empathizing with their challenges, in order to deliver cost-effective practical solutions.

Brian's primary practice areas are in health law, business law, taxation, and trust and estate planning and administration.
